President’s Message

Following on from our amazing Centenary, this year has seen a continued improvement in all the critical aspects of the Society such as events, finance and sponsorship.

Given the difficult financial climate, it is pleasing to report that the Society’s finances are in great shape and I would like to express my personal thanks to Bob Bohannon and the team at Balham for all of their work in supporting the Society in this key aspects of the running of the Society.

In Erco and Tridonic, we have gained two new Sponsors in Partnership; ensuring that, along with the continued support of Holophane, Philips and Thorn, our Masterclasses continue to thrive and provide top quality lighting education across the UK and Ireland.

For our members, one of the most visible improvements is the website; as a more self-contained website, it strengthens the SLL brand and is easier to navigate. Visually too, it is much improved and the capability to build a library of case studies will facilitate an increasing range of photos of good lighting, just what the SLL is all about.

The Society’s Executive continues to build for the future and develop the principles of the Society formed over a hundred years ago into one for the fast-moving industry we now find ourselves in; I look forward to supporting our new President, Peter Raynham, who I am sure, will continue this evolution and represent us as being the Society for everyone interested in lighting.
Finance Report

The Society remains is great financial shape; despite difficult economic times, publication sales continue to thrive and membership numbers have been maintained. This sound financial position will enable the Society to continue to develop and expand its activities and services to members.

Society Events

The Society continued to stage a variety of events in 2010. Masterclasses were held in Leicester, Portsmouth, Oxford, Telford, London, Liverpool, Birmingham and Leeds.

A record number of teams entered the annual Ready Steady Light competition, stretching both physical and mental resources to its limit and Young Lighter of the Year also attracted a record number of entrants.

Along with supporting industry events on a national level, the Society continues to hold and support events in the CIBSE regions and London. With amending the format of the London technical evenings the Society is proud to welcome between 80—100 attendees at each of the last two events of the year: October and December.
Awards

Looking to the Future

The start to 2011 has already been a busy and exciting few months for the Society with the Young Lighter of the Year being held at ARC in front of over one hundred spectators and probably the toughest ever level of competition at Ready Steady Light.

The Society is heavily involved with trying to shape the future of Part L of the Building Regulations and is pushing for a sea-change in the metrics involved, moving to consumption-based energy targets and away from luminaire and lamp efficacy metrics. This is a key time in the process and one that the members can play a pivotal role, so please do get involved.

Planning is underway for the 2011-12 Masterclass series; for those of you who have yet to attend one, you are missing out on a packed full one-day seminar where you can truly get up to date on the latest developments on lighting. I would encourage every member to attend once a year as they are truly magnificent. Other events are also being planned in London and across the regions so keep an eye on the website for the latest information on events and activities.
